

THE FUNERAL WAS DELAYED.

Two Women Lay Claim to Body of George Bough, of the Tenderloin.

ONE SAYS SHE IS HIS WIFE.

Injunction Issued Permitting
the Widow to View
the Body.

EXCITING SCENE TO-DAY.

Mrs. Bough and Her Lawyer Not Permitted to Enter the House of Death.

Five coaches and a hearse drew up at the door of 14 West Thirty-seventh street at 9:30 o'clock this morning, at which hour and place the funeral of George Bough, the Tenderloin bartender, who died in Roosevelt Hospital Thursday, was announced to take place.

A number of friends of the dead man were also present. The funeral, however, did not take place at the hour named because an injunction was issued late on Saturday night.

At 8:30 this morning a dramatic scene occurred at the house of Mr. Bough's sister. The wife, accompanied by her two lawyers, Mr. Chadsey and Mr. Atkinson, drove up to the door and requested permission to view the body.

Mrs. Bough became so much excited she fainted away and fell into Mr. Chadsey's arms.

The contest now for possession of the Miss Bough's body went to Justice Duane to-day. Bough was a bartender who inherited about $3,000 several months ago. New York says he had been leading a wild life in company with the woman who now claims to be his widow. When he died the body was removed to the home of John Harkins, 144 West Thirty-seventh street, where Bough's widow claimed that Bough's relatives refused to let her see the body. Just before midnight Saturday, Mrs. Bough obtained an injunction from Judge McAdam, restraining Miss Bough from burying the body or removing it except to put it in a vault further than twenty-five miles from New York.

This injunction was obtained in the name of Alice Bough, to recover damages for assault, and for taking and keeping possession of the body.

John Meyer, counsel for Miss Bough, applied for a modification of the injunction, to the extent of permitting removal of the body to Calvary Cemetery.

At Judge Duane's suggestion, the case was adjourned until Monday, on condition that Alice Bough would not prevent Mrs. Bough from seeing Bough's body at the cemetery, in the absence of his other relatives, provided she could never open the vault or obtain authorities to give her access to the vault.

Alice Bough applied for letters of administration on the estate of George Bough to-day. She described herself as his widow. The estate is believed to be worth about $7,000.

The widow, George Bough took place shortly before noon from the home of his uncle, John Harkins, 144 West Thirty-seventh street, followed the bier to Calvary Cemetery, where the body was placed in a vault. There were no religious services at the house.
